There was no ceremony of any kind beyond that prescribed by the Constitution.

Immediately upon taking the oath Mr. Smith sat down at the cabinet table and remained to take part in the special cabinet session which had been called for 11 o'clock by the President.

President McKinley and all the cabinet officials, including Mr. Gary, witnessed the swearing in. Mr. Gary at once retired from the cabiret room, taking with him the affectionate farewell and best wishes of the President and all the officials with whom he has served. Mr. Gary gave evidence of deep feeling at leaving his associates, most of whom have addressed him letters of regret.

Congratulations were extended Mr .Smith by all the assembled party. Hundreds of eengratulations have been sent him by wire from friends and admirers throughout the country.

Mr. Smith's Career.

Charles Emory Smith, the new Postmaster General, was born in Mansfield, Conn., in 1842. His parents removed to Albany, N. Y., when he was a child. He was educated at Albany Academy and at Union College, Schenectady, N. Y. During the College, Schenectady, N. Y. During the civil war he was actively engaged as aid to General Rathbone, under the war governor Morgan, in raising and organizing Union volunteers. Mr. Smith became editor of the Albany Express in 1865. In 1870 he became joint editor of the Albany Evening Journal, and in 1877 sole editor. He was elected a delegate to the republican national convention in 1876, and was made secretary of the platform committee. He was elected in 1878 regent of the university by the legislature of New York.

Mr. Smith was a delegate to republican state conventions in New York for several successive years and was invariably made chairman of the committee on resolutions and author of the platform. In 1880 he removed to Philadelphia and became editor of the Press. In 1881 he was selected to make the opening speech of the republican campaign in Pennsylvania. In 1884 he was one of the earliest and most active in the canvass for Blaine's nomination. In 1890 he was appointed by President Harrison minister to Russia, and served for two years, when he resigned. While in Russia he was active in the relief work in the great Russian famine of 1891 and 1892, having charge of the distribution of the American contribution of over $100,000 in money and five shiploads of food.

He has been active in various campaigns as a speaker, and in 1895 he stumped Ohio with the then Governor McKinley, and spoke at the opening mass meeting at Canton in 1896. Mr. Smith has delivered numerous political and literary addresses. It is generally understood that Mr. Smith wrote a large part of the republican naticnal platferm of 1896.

BAYONNE, France, April 22, 10:35 a.m.-The farewell of the United States minister. Gen. Stewart L. Woodford, to Spain was in keeping with the dignity he displayed throughout the crisis. When asked if he had anything to say he simply raised his hat and said: "Good-bye."

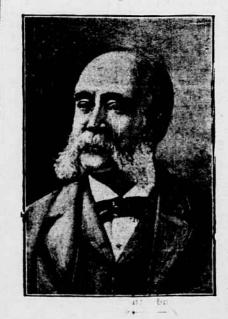

The Segovia incident was comparatively unimportant. The students of the military school, in full uniform, packed the depot. They were silent until the train started, when there was an enthusiastic outburst of cheering for Spain and Cuba.

The Valladolid affair, however, threatened to be quite serious. Thousands of excited people attempted to invade the railroad station, and the twenty civil guards, who accompanied the train were compelled to form up in front of General Woodford's carriage, with drawn swords, while other civil guards of the local force, issued from the depot to protect the train. The guards did everything possible to keep back the mob, whose yells and shricks resounded on all sides. Stones were thrown at the train and windows broken. A newspaper man was wounded in the face by broken glass. Mr. Hall, the recorder of the city of Londen, had a narrow escape from being hit by stones, and Mr. Montague Hughes Crackenthorpe, Q. C., had a similar experience.

to Appear in The Star. Among the many features of interest in the big Saturday Star this week will be the Illness of Senator Edward C. Walthall first installment of a new and intensely exciting serial story from the pen of Robert W. Chambers, the well-known and popular novelist.

In "Ashes of Empire," the name of his latest piece of fiction, Mr. Chambers has done some of his very best writing, and the readers of The Star may rest assured that in the story they will not find a dry or uninteresting line. From beginning to end it is full of incident, and is written in a thoroughly breezy and readable style. It will run through fifteen installments, one appearing in The Star each Saturday. The scene of the story is laid at first in Paris at the close of the Second Empire, and the story begins with a thrilling description of the flight of the Empress from the Louvre. Given such a scene and such a time and a writer of the imagination and descriptive powers of Mr. Chambers, it not be far above the average of modern fiction.

A careful examination of it prompts the suggestion that the South American republic had fiscal rather than friendly reasons for disposing of the vessels. The price of Brazilian coffee has now fallen lower than it was ever quoted before. The figure on regular contract deliveries is 5 cents per pound. UNIVERSAL REGRET EXPRESSED

THE SENATOR'S CAREER

Senator Edward C. Walthall of Mississippi died at the Cairo apartment house in this city at 5:30 o'clock vesterday afternoon. Senator Walthall's death was not unexpected. He had been ill for several weeks, and, as a matter of fact, had been in bad health for years. He contracted a severe cold in January, which was augmented the 7th of the Senate that day, in spite of the protests of his physicians, to deliver a eulogy on his colleague, the late Senator George. The Saturday following the delivery of this a severe attack of typhoid pneumonia, which, as stated, resulted fatally,

There were with Senator Walthall at the time of his death his wife his sister Mrs. Freeman, and his niece, Mrs. Clark, and her daughter. Representatives Allen and Fox of Mississippi were almost constant in their attendance at the bedside of the dead

The funeral services over the remains of Senator Walthall are to take place in the Senate chamber at 12 o'clock tomorrow. The President and cabinet, members of the Senate and House and of the Supreme Danish West Indies, where a naval sta-Court and the District Commissioners are expected to be present. The services will be conducted by Rev. Dr. McKim.

At 8 o'clock in the evening the remains will be taken on a special car by the South-ern railroad to Mississippi. Mr. W. W. Finley, the second vice president of the Southern railroad, has tendered the use of his private car to Mrs. Walthall, and she will travel in this. The senators appointed upon the funeral committee is as follows: Messrs. Money, Berry, Bate, Pettus, Spooner, Gray, Proctor, Pasco and Cannon,

It is not too much to say that Senator

Walthall commanded the love and respect of all who knew him. Refined, gentle and courteous in his manner, and yet at all times firm, manly and honest in his dealings with every one, he easily held a place in their hearts.

Sketch of His Career. Senator Edward Cary Walthall was a Virginian by birth, having been born in Richmond, Va., the 4th of April, 1831. When a boy he went to Mississippi, where he received an academic education at Holly Springs. Having completed his academic course he entered the law class from which he graduated. He was admitted to practice before the courts of Coffeeville, Miss., in 1852. Four years later he was elected dis

To see an object plainly he is compelled to get his optics within a few inches of it. The other day while pottering around his house, the old man undertook to repair the picket fence around the yard. Many of the palings had been knocked off, and these it was his purpose to replace. He armed himself with hammer and nalls and started in. He got his first paling in place, and with much labor succeeded in fastening it there. But this was not all. When he started to move on to the next break he was brought up standing with a yell of pain. He had the crossbar. His yells attracted the attention of his good wife, who, when she realized the situation, brought her scissors into play and released the old man is extremely near-sighted. To see an object blist of British officers would, lowered a boat and proceeded to investigate. Arrived at the bark, he found it difficult to approach on account of the tangle of broken spars and rigging which drifted alongside. On the deck there was not the slightest sign of human occupancy. The boats had gone, the wheel was smashed, and the deck house carried away flush with the deck. In the forcastle, however, sick in his bunk, was an English sailor, who told an almost increditable tale. In lands were summoned on deck to take in sail, and so prepare for an approaching squall. The sailor was too sick for this service, so kept his berth. And it was well he did, for of all the company on deck not a single man survived. A huge sea came along, swept the bark from bow to stern, and carried overboard every living soul minus a considerable portion of his beard. extremely near-sighted. To see an object
